Advertising Tips

Supply your logos in vector format. These usually have the file extension of .eps .ai .pdf or .svg. These are the formats your original logo was first created in.

Make sure to convert your text to outlines upon submission to avoid missing fonts, or supply your advert with your brand fonts attached.

Make sure you use high-resolution imagery. If you have a pixelated or blurry image this may become poor in quality when we scale it up in size.

Think about how your colours may appear in print materials. RGB colours are often brighter and more colour rich than CMYK and so your brand might look slightly different when printed.

Make sure to triple-check spelling and grammar before submission.

Consider where your artwork is going to be placed. If on the pitch side, for example, make sure your essential information stands out and is at a visible size to be seen from a distance.
